Field of the Invention This invention relates to a treatment composition for electrolysis and a treatment method for electrolysis. This invention particularly relates to an electrolysis treatment composition for electrolysis of an aqueous solution containing a metal which is used in semiconductor production, steel making and plating, and a method for electrolysis of an aqueous solution containing a metal which is used in semiconductor production, steel making and plating. 2. Description of the Prior Art Ferrous ion is a very important raw material, which is used for the production of semiconductors and various types of foodstuffs. It is possible to obtain ferrous ion in the form of iron-containing silica and iron. Therefore, in order to obtain the starting material of ferrous ion, it is necessary to remove iron from the iron-containing silica in the form of iron carbide. Conventionally, this removal has been carried out by distillation. In recent years, there has been a need for the development of new methods for removing iron from the iron-containing silica, which are beneficial from the point of view of energy saving, resource saving and reduction of environmental pollution. Furthermore, in view of the increasing cost for energy, there has been a need for development of electrolysis methods which require small amounts of energy. In recent years, attention has been paid to electrolysis methods in which electrode materials are consumed 3da54e8ca3
