" We have the duty to be loyal to the Pakistani nationality as well as keeping our faith" PCR. Composite Index Number (CIN): U8310CKZ1BC355. Join the Discussion The Review January 06, 2018 Cabinet minister Bhatti and his family members were killed in a massive house explosion that targeted his residence in Lahore in 2013. The Punjab home department has said that the explosion was a result of an accident. According to officials, there were 13 people, including Bhatti's wife and children, who died in the incident. Bhatti told CNN in a separate interview that he had experienced a series of hate-filled messages via social media. "It was back in 2013, [and] there were people that I've known and had found them online," he said. "They sent me a lot of hate messages." Bhatti added that he's not an easily afraid man, and that he is educated enough to recognize the person behind the messages. "I'm not easily intimidated, but the hate was so hard that I decided I needed to start documenting this [hate]," Bhatti said. Bhatti said there have been "two or three" instances when a so-called friend from outside Pakistan tried to get people to kill him, he said. "The family didn't give me any type of protection at all," Bhatti said. "The situation is one of those situations [where] I don't know when the next time [I'll] be murdered in my sleep." The ousted minister was the first Pakistani Christian to hold a cabinet-level position in the country. According to the Christian Community Forum for the Development of Pakistan, there are approximately 32 million Christians living in Pakistan, representing the world's second-largest Christian population. The community has been facing extreme levels of persecution for many years. Bhatti said he will continue to fight for the rights of Christians and other minorities. "I'm not going to just walk away and allow the injustices to continue," he said. "There are so many injustices that are happening in Pakistan. We've had a very good, strong voice [at the table]. We've got to continue [doing so].... We have the duty to be loyal to the Pakistani nationality as well as keeping our faith." The earthquake flattened homes and damaged thousands of other buildings in the city of Bor, as well
